AMUSEMENT NOTES

"The Only Girl" Scored a Great Success in New York City.

The great success of the new Victor Herbert-Henry Blossom musical comedy, "The Only Girl," during its engagement of nine months in New York at the Lyric theatre, would seem to indicate that the days of the conventional musical comedy are already numbered, even to those who do not usually associate sensible entertainment with the theatre.

The great charm of "The Only Girl" lies in the fact, that at every point it insists on getting out of step with that style of interminable entertainment called musical comedy, that is evidently designed that it shall not differ in any conspicuous way from all the others that have preceded it. "The Only Girl" being deliberately different is therefore delightful.

"The Only Girl" is to have a return engagement in this city and in view of its many manifold charms of music and story it certainly should prove interesting news to all theatre-goers.

Gladys Klark Company.

When the Gladys Klark company opens its engagement for one week at the Barre opera house next Monday evening with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, it will come prepared to give the theatregoers of Barre all that is worth while in dramatic entertainment.

Miss Klark is a capable business woman as well as being an accomplished actress and she is aware of the fact that motion pictures have played havoc with the legitimate drama, so far as road companies are concerned. For this reason she has surrounded herself with versatile performers, who can not only hold their audiences with speaking lines, but can offer specialties as well. The specialties between the acts will, of course, eliminate the tiresome intervals which are so marked with the average dramatic company. Hence those who attend the performances of the Gladys Klark company will not experience one dull moment. At the end of each act the curtain will rise promptly, and "the tired business man" or the fatigued housewife will be entertained in a refreshing way. There are a variety of novelties to be presented between the acts of the different productions, and the program will be changed from day to day.

The opening play on Monday evening will be "Bought and Paid For," the most remarkable play of our time, by George H. Broadhurst.

No telling of the plot can give you anything more than a faint idea of the wonderful character drawings of the play.

First there is Virginia Blaine, the delicate and refined telephone operator, who marries the "self-made" king of finance. Virginia is the daughter of people in whom real gentility was an inborn quality.

Fanny, her sister, is the type of pretty, big-hearted girl of the shops, on whose shoulders refinement will never rest with ease, but who would willingly give her last cent to help a comrade in need.

Jimmy Gilley is the most perfect specimen of genuine "Nutmeg" ever placed behind the footlights. Ignorant, thick, rather coarse, selfish.

Robert Stafford, the man who fought his way from the gutter to place of financial prominence, is another familiar type, that of the man who has ruthlessly battled his way to the front rank.

These four parts are wonderfully well played by the principals. The small parts are in excellent hands and the costumes

George Beban in "The Pawn of Fate," Park Theatre To-morrow.

Pierre Dufrene, a peasant of Normandy, and his pretty wife leave their picturesque farm for the gay world of Paris, confident that in Pierre the world is to discover a new artist genius.

Pierre is really the dupe of a wealthy Parisian painter who has fallen in love with Pierre's wife. Lesar, the Parisian, plays upon Pierre's artistic ambition and lures him on to become at last the butt of a cruel jest.

His illusion shattered and his faith in his wife dimmed Pierre turns upon his false friend and takes partial toll for his wrongs in physical violence.

In the depths of despair, Pierre is about to seek solace in suicide when arrested and confronted by the man he has mortally wounded.

In his dying moments Lesar atones and the reconciliation between Pierre and his wife comes in a scene of deep pathos and compelling heart interest.—adv.
